The Dominican Republic town of Punta Cana is best known for its beautiful beaches, which face the Atlantic Ocean and Caribbean Sea.

Everyone knows that the Dominican Republic produces some of the world's greatest baseball players. But at the PUNTACANA Resort & Club, the idyllic Caribbean vacation spot is becoming home to some of the world's elite golf courses as well.

This past spring, the resort introduced the Corales Golf Course, designed by legendary golf architect Tom Fazio. The course is set between coral reefs, cliff sides and includes six oceanfront holes that hopefully won't distract you too much from your game. The course is punctuated by an 18th hole that spans the Bay of Corales.

La Cana, another world-class course at the PUNTACANA Resort & Club was designed by P.B. Dye. The course is often referred to as the jewel of Caribbean golf, with an astonishing 14 ocean view holes.

In early 2011, a third gem designed by P.B. Dye will be open for use. Known as the Hacienda, the course will also be home to 400 new residences.

Beyond the incredible course, the resort encompasses 15,000 acres, with a full-service spa, an ecological reserve with 15 natural springs, a shopping center, a day camp for children ages four-to-12, and eight restaurants offering a range of cuisines and dining experiences.
